A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

PREFACE

THE original manuscript from which this volume is printed, is preserved in the India Office, London, where it is known as the first volume of the Court Minutes of the East India Company; and consists of 120 leaves foolscap folio, written in the old court hand of the Elizabethan period. Some few years ago it was sent, with other documents, to the Public Record Office to be calendared, and there fell under the notice of my late father, Mr. Henry Stevens of Vermont, who, ever watchful for new materials for history, especially American, immediately recognised its importance. Finding that only a very small portion had ever been quoted, he determined with the sanction of the Authorities of the India Office, to print it in full, and forthwith employed an expert to transcribe it exactly with all its peculiarities of spelling and contraction. This proved a work of time and of considerable difficulty, as the handwriting is extremely illegible in places, and in some cases several opinions were required to decipher certain passages.

The transcript, on completion, was handed to Messrs. Charles Whittingham and Co. of the Chiswick Press, with instructions to follow copy in the minutest particulars of spelling and contractions, a task which somewhat taxed their resources and ingenuity for peculiar types. The proofs, after careful correction with the transcript, were re-read with the original manuscript by an independent expert, and many and curious were the corrections which resulted.

Mr. Stevens's intention was to have written a lengthy essay by way of introduction, but he was unfortunately prevented by failing health and the pressure of other work. I may add, however, that from his memoranda it appears he was probably more interested in the volume from an American than from an Indian point of view. Perhaps this is pardonable when it is remembered how close were his sympathies and studies with the history and geography of the land of his birth; nevertheless, the importance of the British and Indian aspect of the volume must by no means be lost sight of. Finding that his memoranda were not sufficiently detailed to be capable of extension, Sir George Birdwood has kindly assented to my request to write an introduction.

Of the voyage for the discovery of the North-West Passage here recorded, very little has hitherto been known beyond the details given by Waymouth himself in his Journal, printed by Purchas, volume iii. pages 809-814. The present volume tends to contradict some of the statements there given, for in the opening paragraph of the Journal Waymouth says, his ships were "thoroughly victualled and abundantly furnished with all necessaries for a yeere and an halfe, by the right Worshipfull Merchants of the Moscouie and Turkie Companies," whereas we now learn that the expedition was undertaken at the sole instance of the East India Company, and certainly at first with some opposition from the Moscovie Company. George Waymouth was one of my father's most favourite subjects for study, and I have hopes that some interesting particulars respecting him may yet be gleaned from memoranda made for the introduction to an account of another of his Voyages which is also in the press.

Another point which greatly interested Mr. Stevens in this volume is the mention of the 'May flowre,' and I have heard him express a very decided opinion that the vessel here referred to was undoubtedly the veritable Pilgrim Ship. The mention of Hakluyt is also worthy of attention. On the 29th of January 1600 (see page 123) he is referred to as "Mr Hacklett the historiographer of the viages of the East Indies," and "was required to sett downe in wryting a note of the principall places in the East Indies wher Trade is to be had to thend the same may be vsed for the better instructiō of o^r factors in the said voyage," and on the 16th of February (see page 143) we find that £10 was paid to him for his "advyses." The further payment of 30s. for three maps on the same date, raises the delightful query as to what maps they were, whether three different ones or three copies of Molyneux's "true hydrographical description of so much of the world as hath been hitherto discovered and is come to our knowledge," published just about this time and inserted by Hakluyt in some copies of his 'Principall Navigations,' but of which only some nine or ten specimens have come down to posterity. The last copy came to light in 1881, when it realised £131 at public auction. It would indeed be interesting if another copy should turn up amongst the East India Company's records.

The letters printed on pages 265 to 283, are probably draft letters of the "Company of Levant Merchants," and they commence at the opposite end of the manuscript volume to the minutes of the East India Company. From the first letter being dated March, 1599, while the first entry of the East India Company is September, 1599, it would appear that the book originally belonged to the Levant Company, but was afterwards used by both companies in common. This tends to show that the East India Company was partially an outgrowth of the Levant Company, as several persons mentioned appear to have been prominent members of both Companies, notably Sir Thomas Smith, who held the office of Governor of each (see pages 62 and 281). Under these circumstances it was thought best to print these letters, although they do not pertain directly to the East India Company.

A word as to method of printing. The manuscript has been followed with the greatest possible care, though in one or two instances the greatest experts of the Record Office and others were at variance over a word or figure. The reader's indulgence is therefore requested should he discover an error. The words printed within brackets [] are struck through in the original as corrections, but have been printed here, as in many cases they tend to the better understanding of the sentence. The passages printed in italics are interlineated in the manuscript. The Index, which I undertook at my father's request, I have endeavoured to make as copious as possible.

HENRY N. STEVENS.

INTRODUCTION

"Qui mare teneat, cum necesse rerum potiri."—CICERO, Ep. ad Att., x.

THE History of the East India Company is a work that has still to be written, although from its rise, at the close of the sixteenth century, to its disappearance thirty years ago, the Company was careful to provide all the necessary material for the task, and to place on formal record the simplest acts of its administration, and the reasons which prompted all its decisions. The value of these contemporary annals—for the Court Books, Factory Diaries, Consultations, and general correspondence, really constitute a continuous narrative—has been only impaired in a small degree by the ravages of time, and by the neglect of less careful custodians than the men who originally determined that their successors in office should gain by their example and experience, and that the Company itself should not suffer in the eyes of posterity from any ambiguity as to its proceedings. The present volume, printed as a labour of love under the direction and at the charge of the late Mr. Henry Stevens, is, so far as print can be made a facsimile of manuscript, identical with the first Court Book kept by the adventurers trading to the East Indies, who received from Queen Elizabeth in the last year of the sixteenth century a patent, or charter, recognizing them as the East India Company, with a monopoly of trade and specified privileges for a given term of years.

The first entry is of the names of those persons who subscribed on 22nd September, 1599, to "the pretended voiage to the Easte Indias, the whiche it maie please the Lorde to psper;" and the last is the report of a committee meeting on 28th June, 1603. Within those four years is contained the germ of every triumph subsequently achieved in the seas and lands of the East. The committees to which the adventurers entrusted the guidance of their affairs not merely laid down the countries with which it was desirable to trade, and the English commodities for which their markets might provide a vent, but they dwelt upon the inconveniences of the long sea route by the Cape of Good Hope to India, and listened with approval to any project, however visionary, for bringing London nearer to the wealthy kingdoms of Asia. As will be seen, their hopes centred in the North-West passage, which Robert Thorne had been the first to advocate in Henry VIII.'s reign as furnishing a road to Cathay and India, and which long continued to dangle before the eyes of the Company as a glorious possibility, never realizing its promise until in our time the discovery has been made, and the feat accomplished, not by naval skill and daring, but by the connexion of the two great oceans of the world by a line of railway. The early references to America contained in this volume will be of peculiar interest to the descendants of the Pilgrim Fathers of the May Flower,¹ who have so rapidly spread themselves over that mighty continent, and who have so brilliantly carried on the commercial traditions of the Mother Country of us all.

The present volume, the first Court Book, furnishes irrefragable evidence that the managers of the East India Company began their undertaking in a thoroughly practical and businesslike manner. They encountered a rebuff, however, on the very threshold of their enterprise, for after three meetings they were obliged to postpone their first voyage until the following year in consequence of the negotiations then in progress with Spain for the conclusion of a peace. The active life of the Company, therefore, did not commence until the meeting at Founders' Hall, on 23rd September, 1600, whereat it was announced that "it was her Ma^{ty} pleasure that they shuld proceade in ther purpose." The first steps taken were the appointment of committees to select and purchase suitable vessels for the voyage, as well as the necessary stores and equipment. The Susan, or more strictly the Great Susan, the Hector, and the Assention, were the first three vessels purchased, and then, after protracted bargaining with its owner, the Earl of Cumberland, the Mare Scurge, afterwards re-named the Red Dragon, was procured as the Admiral's ship. These four vessels constituted what is termed "the First Voyage," but a fifth, and much smaller vessel, named the Guift,¹ was added to them for the conveyance of some of the indispensable supplies of the squadron, and it was to be cast adrift at the discretion of the commander. The committees had to report to the Court every particular of their transactions with the owners of the ships, and these form the substance of the first half of the present volume. The inventories of the four ships named, given at pp. 15-20, pp. 22-4, pp. 42-4, are exceedingly curious, and mention everything on board from culverins and masts to "1 pease pott & 2 grid-irons." The Mare Scurge, of 600 tons burden, and twice the size of the next largest vessel of the fleet, the Hector, cost £3,700. The Susan was purchased for £1,600; but the prices given for the others are not stated. The Guift cost £300. These sums included everything on board, as well as the vessels themselves, and with regard to two of them it was stipulated that the seller should take back his ship at half price on its safe return.

The ships having been procured, the next thing was to make them ready for sea, and this was done with all dispatch—the workmen on the Mare Scurge being allowed a barrel of beer a day to prevent their running to the ale-house. They were then provided with their proper companies, the Mare Scurge having 200 men, the Heffor 100 men, the Susan 80 men, and the Assention 80 men. The sailors received two months' wages in advance, and the officers were treated in an equally liberal manner. Great care was shown in the selection of the latter, and when the Lord Treasurer made a special appeal for Sir Edward Michelborne to be employed in the voyage the Court firmly refused "to imploy anie gent," and requested "leave to sort ther busines wth men of ther owne quality." Captain James Lancaster was appointed Captain of the Mare Scurge, and Admiral of the Squadron. Captain John Middleton commanded the Heffor, with the succession to the chief command in the event of Lancaster's death. Both these officers were also appointed principal factors. The Master of the Susan was Samuel Spencer, and of the Assention, Roger Hankin.

The Company had difficulties of its own. Some of the adventurers were not prompt in paying up their instalments, and in April, 1601, the Company was £7,000 in default, and had to appeal to the Lords of the Privy Council for special powers to deal with those that "shewe themselves remisse & vnwillinge to furnysh there promysse'd contribucons," and this request was granted. The order is a characteristic one, and will be found at pp. 165-6. The Company issued warrants against the defaulters in accordance with this order, and we may assume that this summary mode of dealing was attended with satisfactory results as the subject gradually disappears from the Court Minutes.

On 1st May, 1601, the Court sanctioned the payment of "twentie merkes" to the King of Heralds for assigning Corporate Arms to the Company, but these were not the same Insignia¹ of Community, with the motto "Auspicio Regis et Senatus Angliæ," which, at a later date, became renowned throughout the East. Very stringent rules were also passed for the maintenance of order in the Court, and some of them would not be without their value in a more august assembly at the present day, as, for instance, the regulation providing that no brother of the Company should speak to any one matter "above three sundry tymes." The penalty of doing so was 3*s.* 4*d.*, a considerable amount in those days. Penalties of different amounts were inflicted for uncivil or intemperate speeches and behaviour, for interruptions, such as private whisperings, &c., for breaking silence when enjoined by the Governor, for leaving the Court without permission, and the refusal to pay these fines or penalties entailed a term of imprisonment. For further information on these points the reader must be referred to pp. 201-4.

They are very beautiful, the shield being divided into three bands, the uppermost bearing conventional red and white Tudor roses on a gold ground; the middle the conventional white lilies of France on a blue ground; and the lowermost, three quaint heraldic ships sailing all in a line on an azure sea. The supporters are a blue sea lion on either side. The crest is a terrestrial globe, beflagged right and left; and the motto "Deus indicat." And God did indeed fulfil the expectation of his trustful ones.

It was in June, 1603, that news was received through a Frenchman that left the English fleet at sea of its safe return to European waters, but the first Court Book contains only special reference to the arrival of the Assention, from the officers of which vessel several letters were read in the General Court held on 6th June, 1603. Ten days later the reward of five pounds was assigned to Mr. Middleton of Plymouth "for his paines ryding hether wth the first report of the coming of the Assention out of the East Indies." Special orders were sent down to Plymouth that the ship was not to break bulk until anchored in the Thames. Warehouses suitable for the reception of its cargo were taken, tithes were paid to the Lord High Admiral for a prize captured at sea, and on the 16th June the entrance of the vessel into the river was publicly announced. Six pounds had then to be paid for pilotage and £917 for customs to the King (for James I. had succeeded "Good Queen Bess"), before the adventurers were in a position to know how their first journey had prospered. The Court Book says modestly that it afforded encouragement for a second venture, but for more exact and detailed information concerning the return of the East India Company's first squadron from Asia the reader will refer to the passages themselves.

Very soon after the sailing of the first fleet for India by the Cape of Bona Speransa, the project of discovering a route to the East Indies by the North-West Passage was brought before the Court by "one George Waymoth¹ a navigator." The subject was considered in a dual form—first, whether the Company would take it up and be at the charge of fitting out two or three pinnaces, and secondly, if it would not accept this direct responsibility, would it leave the matter to private men, and reward their discovery by the surrender of the trade by this route for certain years? Whether from fear of losing any of the privileges and advantages of the monopoly of trade with China and the East Indies, or from pure public spirit, it was determined that "the findinge out of the Northwest passage" shall be "consented unto for a voyage." The readiness of the Court to undertake this quest, and to seriously take up George Waymouth's idea can only be understood by realising the state of geographical knowledge at the time, and the hopes of the commercial classes of the discovery of new and short routes to the Indies as well as of new countries.

The discovery of the North-West Passage had been the first ambition of English navigators. Henry VIII.'s letters patent to John Cabot and his three sons in 1496 were for the discovery of this very route.² In the next reign Robert Thorne advocated the same project which Sebastian Cabot revived under Edward VI. and Mary, and the expedition of Sir Hugh Willoughby and Richard Chancellor to the White Sea, partly a failure and partly a success, was really another attempt to solve the same problem. The voyages of Martin Frobisher, in 1576-8, were the first to give any tangible ground of hope in the discovery of an inlet on the coast of Labrador running westward, and he was "highly commended of all men for the great hope he brought of a passage to Cathaia." These different attempts made in the course of a century, were so many endeavours to realise the predictions of Seneca and Pulci.¹ The latter clearly prophesied that across the Atlantic would be discovered not only a new world, but a new route to the East.

Political considerations confirmed the traditions kept alive by the bolder geographers and men of science of antiquity, and also of the renaissance. Da Gama's dis-

"But see, the sun speeds in his western path

There was a general looking forward in the thirteenth, fourteenth, and fifteenth centuries, to the discovery of the American and the Australasian continents. The lines of Dante, 1265-1321, in the Vision of Purgatory, in which he alludes to the Southern Cross, are well known. I believe that the leading minds of ancient Rome had an equally clear, if not even a clearer conception of the as yet unrevealed lands lying indefinitely beyond the Atlantic and Indian Oceans. Pliny (Bk. II., Chap. 65) positively asserts the existence of the Antipodes: and records (Chap. 67) the tradition of "certain Indians, who sailing from India" for the purpose of commerce had been driven by tempests into Germany. If the story had any foundation in fact, these Indians could only have been North American Indians, such as the Esquimaux. Seneca's hackneyed line: "Nec sit terris ultima Thule" is not so vague a prophecy of the Americas as it appears separated from the context (Medea, Act II., lines 370-covery of the Cape route to the Indies had been to the benefit of a Portuguese monopoly, not of the commercial interests of Europe at large. For a century the Portuguese enjoyed as undisturbed a supremacy east of the Cape as the Spaniards had for three-fourths that period on the Spanish Main. When the English navy was in its infancy that of Portugal had reached its prime, and was, indeed, squandering the magnificent inheritance of Da Gama and Albuquerque. It seemed to English navigators and merchants that the only practical way of coping with the Portuguese in eastern seas was by the discovery of a new route thither of which England might claim and possess the sole right of usage. In the sixteenth century English naval enterprise found its chief impulse in this consideration, and when the next century was marked by the beginning of an East India Company whose programme was to compete with the Portuguese and Dutch—for the latter had also, and 380): and he really seems to have anticipated the advice of the American humourist in not prophesying before he knew, when his poetical vision of the New World is compared with a prosaic passage, which I believe is now brought to light for the first time in this connexion, from his Quæstionum Naturalium Libri Septem. Herein he distinctly states that the distance from the west coast of Spain to "the Indies" was so short, that it could be sailed over, if the wind was favourable, in a few days. His actual words are: "Curiosus spectator contemnit domicilii angustias. Quantum enim est quod ab ultimis litoribus Hispaniæ usque ad Indos jacet? paucissimorum dierum spatium, si navem suam ventus implevit." It was always the quest and invention of the Indies that inspired Columbus and his English successors in the exploration of the New World; and they but picked up the Americas and the greater part of the Australasias as unconsidered trifles by the way.

before us, embarked on the same undertaking—in a trade by the Cape route, there were many who turned with unconcealed longing to the earlier scheme, as holding forth the promise of easier and more complete success. It was in this hankering feeling after a monopoly and a sway not to be disputed that men like George Waymouth and other advocates of the North-West Passage found their best opportunity and argument.

Such were the prevalent views when Captain Waymouth proposed a fresh search for the North-West Passage, and obtained the sanction of the Court to his design. Although a fleet had sailed only a few months before by the Cape route, then new to Englishmen, the generality of the Company showed every disposition to patronise another attempt to open a route peculiarly dear to the English, and identified with their name. Yet even in this matter, an unexpected obstacle presented itself in the alleged prior rights of the "Muskovia Companie," the parent of the Russia Company of our time. Delays and objections ensued as to the respective privileges of the two Companies, and the deliberations of chosen delegates did not greatly further any practical or definite conclusion. The discussion might have continued indefinitely had not the East India Company taken legal opinion as to their rights, and finding them ample for the purpose in hand sanctioned the scheme as their "Second Voyage" to the Indies. Finding them so firm, the Muskovia Company waived their loftier pretensions, and proceeded to associate themselves in the enterprise. For the purposes of this voyage, a special levy of one shilling for each pound deposited by the adventurers for the Cape experiment was ordered, and special terms, mainly dependent, however, on the result of his voyage, were made with Captain Waymouth. The objects of the journey itself are well expressed on pp. 198-9, whereat are recited some of the chief passages of Elizabeth's patent as well as the reasons which swayed the decision of the Court. The formal agreement between the Company and George Waymouth sets forth that the Governor and Company had deliberated on "the longe and tedious course w^{ch} hath benne hetherto houlden by all such as do trade or sayle from these parts of the world in to y^e East Indies alonge the coast of Europe and Africa by y^e Cape of Bona Esperansa and of the great adventures w^{ch} are borne in soe longe a viage by many kinds of daungers offered therin and beinge moved wth great hope that ther is a possibility of discovery of a neerer Passage into y^e said East Indies by seas by y^e way of the North-west yf the same were vndertaken by a man of knowledge in Navigaçon, &c. &c.," and had in consequence entrusted the task to Captain Waymouth. In a subsequent passage further details are supplied as to how it was thought this would be effected, and these constituted what would now be termed Captain Waymouth's sailing orders. He was to "sayle toward the coast of Groynland into that part of the open seas w^{ch} is described in sundry generall mapps by y^e name of fretum Daues and shall passe on forward in those seas by y^e northwest or as he shall fynd the Passage best to lye towards the parts or kinge-domes of Cataya or China, or y^e backside of America." Queen Elizabeth attached sufficient importance to the undertaking to write a special letter to the Emperor of China and "Kathia," the use of the double names for the one country implying rather the excess, or cautious completeness, of diplomatic courtesy than geographical ignorance.

Considering the great expense to which the Company went in the matter, the many hopes that were based on the enterprise, and the confidence of the commander himself, the speedy, not to say the ignominious return of the expedition, was extremely disheartening. The Court Book throws no further light on the causes of the failure of this well equipped expedition to achieve what was not then known to be impossible, than to attribute it to the intrigues of the minister or preacher, Mr. Cartwright. But Captain Waymouth endeavoured, and not unsuccessfully, to convince the Court to overlook his failure, and to take up new schemes for the discovery of another route, not by the North-west, but by the South-west, or round Cape Horn. There is little doubt that he would have carried his purpose had he not allowed himself to be drawn into litigation with the Company about what he considered his just claims in the matter of the abortive voyage. These were firmly resisted, with the consequence that he failed not only to obtain his damages, but also to induce the Company to employ him on a fresh voyage, as had been intended.

The opposition of the Court to Captain Waymouth's demands and propositions was made the more inflexible by the safe return of the ships that had sailed by way of the Cape of Good Hope. The arrival of the Assention showed where the practically useful route to the Indies lay. It had its difficulties, delays, and dangers, but in comparison with a mythical North-West passage it acquired greater substantiality as one prosperous voyage regularly succeeded another. Hudson, Button, and Baffin followed at short intervals, and with more favourable results, in the footsteps of Waymouth; but even their successes went to demonstrate the impracticability of the main purpose of their voyages, the opening of a North-West Passage. The first Court Book, characteristic in every particular and important in most, is historically curious as officially marking the first indication of the waning hopes of the school of Cabot and Frobisher, and the rising expectations, soon to be confirmed by facts, of that of Lancaster and Middleton, of Saris and Marlowe. The North-West Passage was a great idea based on an error of fact. The long and tedious route by the Cape was a magnificent certainty which supplied English naval skill and daring with their most profitable and glorious field of enterprise. The pretensions of the Portuguese to a monopoly being steadfastly repelled, the opulent trade with the Indies became the prize in a fair and open competition of merit and energy. The present volume is evidence, not of the triumph of the English Company, but of the way in which they made up their minds to deserve and win it. The fruits of the victory they ultimately secured over all rivals, after a contest of two centuries, by the open ocean round the Cape of Good Hope, have been retained unimpaired now that the narrow seas from Gibraltar to Aden have become, since the piercing of the Suez Isthmus, the general thoroughfare to the Indies; and if the North-West Canadian Pacific Railway should realise the anticipations of its authors the practical solution of the old North-West Passage problem would leave the English-speaking races victors still in the secular and mortal struggle of the leading countries of the civilised world for commercial ascendancy, and political existence. The states which through degenerate weariness and faint-heartedness in well doing, fail in this implacable competition are foredoomed to forced decay.

Undying then should be our gratitude to the founders of the East India Company, for they were indeed the pioneers of the unparalleled colonial and mercantile supremacy of modern England: and we may be sure that wherever are not borne down, as they have been, for well nigh a whole generation among ourselves, by the miserable sense of constantly reiterated public shame, but are kept up by the high hopes on which they are perennially nourished in the invincible Republic of the West, and in the proud dominions of the British Crown in the great South Sea, there the names of these middle class Elizabethan merchant adventurers,—who so well understood, when occasion called, how by transgressing, most truly to keep the moral law,—will be for ever cherished and revered as of "brave men, and worthy patriots, dear to God, and famous to all ages."

Our own destruction, as a beneficent power among the nations, may be as inevitable, as our peril, arising mainly from the weakness of the historical instinct in the English democracy, at this moment seems imminent ; but in the worst case we shall have bequeathed the secret of empire, in the New World and the Old, to more resolute inheritors of our common traditions and splendour.

The pticulers wherof herafter shalbe expressed soe wee hope that by your good and discreete meanes you will not onely take that good dilligent and provident Care in the providinge of that w^{ch} is very good well handled and in all respects soe orderly as the necessitie of so longe a viage importeth The first and most especiall thing^e that wee reco^mend vnto your care is for your bisket to see that the same be twice well dryed and that extraordinaryly for it is an extraordinary viage as you knowe and procure as neare as you may to have five Cakes to a pound and that they be whole and sound as neare as you may and for such Cakes as ffall oute to be rather hollowe or broken that you appte them from the rest and keepe them be them selves that they may be first spent wee thinke it your best place to pvide the same in wilbe laⁿe Apsome Darmouth, Plimouth and the places to them adjoyninge for yo^r meale yo^a may provide the same When yo^a can gett the best driest and hardest corne and fittest for yo^r purpose and old corne is best yf yo^a can gett it and being conv^ted into meale yo^a are to take the branne out of it and soe packe it into good drie and sweet caske and to packe it verie hard and Closse and to see the same well hooped and packed cold. Nowe for the Syder yo^a are to be carefull to provide that w^{ch} is good and beinge provided to wracke and for that it is newly made it wilbe good that that when you buy it to condic^on wth them to rec^e the same some 6 weekes after or sooner yf you please to your Choise the reason is for that in the meane tyme it may be settled and growe to be fine alsoe some it will excuse, it were not amisse you bringe yo^r owne Caske for yf you should remove it from hence it wilbe longe before it be fine againe. Alsoe you are to condic^on wth them of whome you buy it that they at their charge deliver it at the water side I meane at the next convenient porte for ladinge of it Nowe the sider beinge bought doth accompte very much to have very good Caske and wel houped and three

Iron Hoopes vppon ech end of ech Cask for What prevaileth it to haue good suder and the cask be not good sweet and well hooped and this beinge effected to sent the same to Dartmouth w^{ch} must be the place of the assembly of all your prouisions the fittest place for the pvidinge of your suder is Colletton Seaton Axmouthe Newton Bushea and aboute Apson^m and Dartmouth.

As for o^r Newland fishe if you are to pvide you are alsoe to be carefull to see yf the same not onely be good fish and well handled but also very Dry and that you take take not anie that ether head or tale be anie thinge moist as often tymes that fishe falleth out to be but yf you be forced to take anie in your ptide you may keepe them by them selues to be first spent And this beinge donne you are to lay the same in a good Close and dry Laughte and pvide good store of ffurre to lay vnder vppon and aboute the same to keepe the moist aire from yt and hereafter you shall receaue further order from vs ether for the packinge of the same Cask or to bunndell it vpp 200 fishes in a bundell old corne wilbe best yf you can gett yt whether old or newe it must be keild dried and after packed in good cask^e and as for saynes Hookes and Linnes you are to pvide them at the discretion of Capten Davis such and soe many as you shall thinke fitt and needefull further at your cominge into the Country you are presently to enquire and lerne what quantetie of wine and vinegre ther is tobe had and at what price and also the price of beanes and pease both white and gray also what store of Iron hoopes ther are to be had and at what price but not to buy anie untill you heare further from vs for that wee are p^{tly} mynded to send you some from hence Likewise you are to write vs forthwth whether ther wilbe cask had ther sufficient and good to serue what you shall neade there or not for y^t yf you cannot fitt your selues thear wth such and as much there as you shall neade that then vppon notice therof from you wee may supply o^r want^e from hence Alsoe you are to certefie vs of the state and price of all those pvisions that wee you in charge to pvide and therwth all yo^r opiñions howe you shalbe able to effect and accomplish the same as neare as

THIS generall Assemblie being called together as well to acquaint them of the proceeding of the busines hetherto pformed in the preparatiõ of the voyage as to informe them of the slacknes of many of the Contributo^{rs} who had sett downe ther names and ther sommes pretended to be adventured and had hetherto brought in noe moneys to furnishe the provision, first the said Assemblie were putt in mynde of ther gesñall Petition and projecte of the viage w^{ch} was offered in all ther names to the ll: of her Ma^{ty} most honorable privy Councell, wherby ther Lordships were humbly intreated by them to Solicite her ma^{ty} in ther names, for her gracious Licence and assent that they might vndertake a voyage to the East Indies for the hon^r of o^r Cuntrey and for the advancem^t of the trade of merchaundize of this Realme conteyning in ther said Petition divers Clawses for the furthraunce of the said viage. It was alsoe remembred vnto them that the Lordes having acquainted her ma^{ty} wth ther said Petition did retorne them her ma^{ty} gracious aunswer and free assent therunto geaving them incoragem^t to goe forward wth assuraunce that ther shuld noe staye be made of ther vyage w^{ch} was certyfyed vnder the handes of the Lord Threñ Lord Admirall L Chambleyn Sr [Rob] W^m Knowles Sr Rob^t Cycill and Secretery Herbert by a lre bearing date the 16 day of Septēber last. And they were further putt in mynde that vppon this Warraunt Certefyed by the lordes of her ma^{ty} Assent and assuraunce to proceade the Companie had since mett together and at ther Gen^rall assemblie holden the 23. of Septemb^r [last following] they, or the most of them having vnder ther owne handes sett downe ther adventures [had] did make choice of Seventeene of the said Contributors whom they appointed to be comitties to dispose and manage the whole busines and preparatiō for the said viage. According to w^{ch} Cōmission geaven the said Cōmitties had hetherto proceeded and had defraied in the [said] preparation of the said viage and stooode ingaged to be aunswerd by exchaung and otherwyse for the so^me of xx m^t poundes at the least; The busines being thus farr proceeded in they were further geaveⁿ to vnderstand That many of the companie who had sett downe ther adventures begaune to wthdrawe ther purpose of p^{ro}ceeding and wthheld ther paym^t of ther moneys vppon some Rumo^r or doubt^s geaveⁿ out that the viage was lyke to receave so^me stay for the removing and clearing of w^{ch} doubt that meanes had bene made by so^me of the Comitties to the lordes of the Councell for ther certifycat to the adventurers that they might wth full assuraunce proceade wthout any just cause of doubt^e, Who thervppon wrote ther l^res to Generalyty confirming ther former l^res of certifi^{ca}t that the said viage shuld receave noe stay or interruption w^{ch} l^res being vnder the handes of the Lord keeper the L Thr^{er} the L Admirall S^r Rob^t Cicell S^r John ffortescue, the L Chief Justice, and M^r Secretary Herbert were openlie read and beare date the 26 day of this instant october [and wthall it was delivered unto the^m]. In w^{ch} last recyted L^res besides the warraunt of incoragem^t geaveⁿ to the Companie to proceade It was notid unto the^m that the actiō vndertakeⁿ by the^m was a publike action and not to be dallied wthall [and to that the] and therfore did require that the names of such as did ether wthdrawe them selves or practise to wthdrawe others from proceeding the^m shuld be certefyed to ther Lorshipes that they might examine the reason^s of ther discouragem^t. After the discourse of all w^{ch} severall matters and proceedinges all the said Assemblie by generall consent did agree to bring in ther moneys w^{ch} was by former [assent] order payable the most of theñ being behinde but for the second paym^t w^{ch} was payable this present day and some of theñ being behinde both for the first and seconde payment, [saving some] amongst w^{ch} only two or three of contributors, ther present denied to adventure at all viz Johñ Bate Roß^t Osseley Nathaniell Martyn and Hughe Hamersley the said Johñ Bate geaving his aunswer that he was disappointed by some that shuld have ioyned wth him in the adventure of CCⁱⁱ and did fall from him, so that he could not adventure for his owne adventure above Cⁱⁱ, and the said Roß^t Osseley Nathaniell Martyn and Hughe Hamersley alledging that they held them selves discharged by a clawse that was sett downe in the last geñall assemblie, w^{ch} was that he that brought not in his adventure by the last of September shuld not be pmitted to adventure at all.

The generalitye having thus agreed to bring in ther monies to further the expedition of the viage they required that order might be taken for all others w^{ch} wthheld ther contributionis and came not at this assembly to geave ther assentes, that they might be called vppon to bring in ther money or to geave ther reason of wth holding it to thende, that according to the Councelles lres they might called before ther Ll: to aunswer the cause yf they did deny to adventure or would not bring ther moneys as by ther owne agreem^t they are to doe.

And forasmuch as the Pattent is already drawen and in the handes of M^r Attorney ready to be pfytted by the course of w^{ch} Pattent the Companie is to consist of a governo^r 24 Comitties and the geñalty this Court have by a most free Election, noiãted for ther governo^r M^r Thomas Smyth Ald^r whose name they do desire may be sett downe in the Pattent to be offred to her Ma^{ie}, and allowed for ther first Governo^r.

And whereas hetherto ther hath beene appointed by the geñalty but 17 Comittyes to dispose and manage the affaires and busines of the trade, nowe forasmuch as by the Pattent ther is to be apointed 24 Comitties for that purpose Ther is choice made at this Assemblie of the full number of fowr and twenty whereof some part are of the former Comitties heretofore employed in the said busines and the residewe are supplied out of the Gefalyty. Soe as the names of all the said Comitties as they are nowe agreed vppon be as hereafter followeth videlt:

Courte touchinge the Northwest passage to move the Muscovia Companie to relinquishe their Claime into the said passage for the tearme of xv yeares to the end this Companie may proceade therein. he the saide m^r Deputie accompanied wth m^r Grenwell did since the said Last Courte reporte to the Governo^r and divers of the said Muskouia Companie assembled together and propounded vnto them the mo^oon of this fellowship touchinge the said passage who gave them this aunswer that they havinge an inheritaunce in the same [said passage] would not by any meanes relinquishe their owne interest therein. for any tearme but yf this Companie would be willinge to joyne wth them in the discoverye of the said passage they would receive as manie of this Companie as will venture wth them and geave them the freedome of the said passage and all plac^e discovered therby in ppetuity wth aunswer beinge Considered of at this Court It is supposed that vnder this offer the Muskovia Companie may be at libertie to venture what they list, and so will supply them selves litle or nothings and the whole or the greatest pte of the adventure will lye vpon this Companie and the discoverye beinge made at their Charge a trade shalbe putt into the other Companies handes for litle or nothinge disboursed or adventured by them for avoidinge of wth doubt It was propounded to the generalitie whether they would be willinge to adventure wth the Muskovia Companie suche sommes as they had already sett downe yf the Muskovia Companie wilbe Content to seclude for the terme of xv yeres all suche of ther owne felowship as will not joine in adventure wth the brethren of this Companie in the discoverie or findinge out of the said passage. Whervnto this Companie do agree and vpon that condition do yelde that all suche somes of money as they have already sett downe towards the furnishing of the voyage for the said Northwest shall be ioyned wth the adventurors of the Muskovia Companie that will proceade together wth them in the said voyage and do require that the booke may be carried abroad amongst the residewe of the Companie that have not yet sett downe ther contributions. And it is ordered that the meane While m^r Deputie and the residewe of the Comitties

This Companie havinge alsoe heretofore resolved to sett out a seconde supply to the East Indies [of one] by the cape of bona Esperansa, and the booke having bene carried abroadē amongest the breethren of this Companie to sett downe the Contributions it appeareth that the Whole adventure already sett downe doeth not excede the valewe of Eleven thowsand poundes. w^{ch} carrieth noe convenient proportion to sett out any voyage at all. And it is Notyfyed to this Co^rt by M^r Governo^r that he beinge of late wth my L Admirall and M^r Secretary at the Court they enquired of him what was the cause that the Companie were so slacke in secondinge ther former voyage considering that the Duche nation had soe honorably gone throughe wth ther voyage and retorned againe wth soe good successe notinge vnto them that this Companie were not soe respective of her ma^{ty} hono^r and the hono^r of ther owne Cuntry as were fytt they shuld be. Whervvpon it was aunswered by some of the Companie that one especiall hinderaunce of the [slacke] proceeding of this voyage is that it is doubted that for some private respectes the Comitties may be drawn in the preparation of the shippinge for the voyage [to fall in to] to preferre suche shippes as shall not be so serviceable as were convenient. Ffor the avoidinge of w^{ch} inconvenience. and to geave furtheraunce to the speady preparation of the voyage It is ordered that Noe ship shalbe prepared or enterteyned for the said voyage vntill the name of suche ship be notyfyed to the generalitie at a generall Court and the gesiall consent of the Companie geaven to certen Comitties to contract for [the] everie or

To y^e Ambassd^r M^r Lylo resident at Constantynople.

Marche.

HONORABLE. wee re^d y^r Lo: Lrē: of the 17 of November 99, wherbie it appeareth that the Graund signior hath Roially graunted all caputulations, saving the consulage of foresteers wherein his redines of assent also appeared but that yoⁿ were crossed by the Frenche Ambassad^r, of whose proceeding besides the advyse w^{ch} yoⁿ wrote vs and [of] [wch] whereof m^r Coltherst did in lyke sorte advertyse vs [in the said conten] touching yo^r crossinge and contention for the [said] said foresteers. wee were made acquainted by [M^r Secretary] S^r Robt. Cycill. by occasion of a complaint w^{ch} the frenche ambassadⁿ lieges heer had made to her ma^{te} and wee were required to write vnto yoⁿ as by order from her ma^{te} to desist all contention [for ye] wth the frenche [for] in that behaulf leaving the dutche and others to ther owne election to patronize them selves [as] wher they seemed best [affection] affected w^{thout} vrging or compelling them by comaundem^t procured. of w^{ch} order geaven vs yo^r [weare] L. hath bene ptelie advertysed [since] by a private Lrē written yoⁿ by M^r Stap. But forasmuch as wee do collecte by the cowrse yoⁿ [purpose] take in sending hether [G^r] signio Paull Pinder to her ma^{te} to acquainte her highnes wth the proceeding of the frenche that ther [is] hathe bene some further and more indirecte working in this matter then yoⁿ do [comitt to] mencon in yo^r Lrēs sent to vs and for that wee do observe by the earnest solliciting of the cause. heer to her ma^{te} that the ffrench [leaveth] omitteth [noe] no meanes or oportunity [omitted] to prevaile in the obteyning his purpose. The matter being both an hono^r and a benifite to [w^{ch}] that side or part wch [soever] prevaileth in the contention [wee thinke it.] And albeit we are willed to signefie to your Lordsh^{ps} it is her ma^{ty} pleasure that yo^u shuld take no course to enforce the dutche or other fforesteers to come under yo^r consulage, yet wee thinke it wysdome not to loose anie advauntage, but to reserve the cause in equall termes vntill yo^u receave a more absolute order in Co^mmission y^mmediatlie from her ma^{ty} and therfore referre o^r selves to yo^r L. approved care of the cause w^{ch} being entred in to so farre as it is would not be remisselie lost or lett [passe] pas.

And touching the accomptes and other p^ticlers by yo^r L. men^cioned to be sent by Signior Paull Pinder wee hope wee shall receave them at his co^ming whereof wee will wryte yo^u o^r [conceptes] opinions as oportunity shall pmitt. the meane tyme wee propounde vnto yo^r L. [for] in the name of the gentalyty the accepting of o^r former motion wch is the allowaunce of 3000 cheskeens to begynne from m^r Bartons decease for y^e defraying of yo^r charges and expences because the companie would gladlie stande vppon a certenty of ther charge as well for yo^r L. as for Mr. Coltherste the Consull at Aleppo wherto wee have [found] heretofore found him inclynable. And wee move yo^u againe the rather for that yt appereth the graund signio^{ry} allowaunce is nowe aunswered and is lyke to be contynued wthout stay or question and also for that divers of yo^r frendes here did [not only] vndertake in yo^r behaulfe that ye choice of you [beinge chosen] that [behaulfe yo^r enter- teynment] for her ma^{ty} ambassador should not only be a saving co^rse to the comp. but that yo^u would willingly accept [therof] of the allowaunce of 3000 c^{ts} w^{ch} was supposed to be more then yo^u [could well expend] neade to expende but only in respecte of the first yeres charge vppon w^{ch} it was considered that yo^u shuld have it allowed yo^u from m^r Bartons death. Our care to avoide the sending [question vse] of Billes of ex- chaung made vppon vs [as] ether for venice [and here in] or for England; and also all question of accepting the same, when they come vppon vs unexpected and wee unprovided hath moved vs to charge all o' goodes. com̃ing to Constantynople and Aleppo besides ther consulage wth $\frac{1}{2}$ doller by way of lone vppon every kersey every Cth of tynn and every Cth of dry skynes to be answered here at v^r v^r the doller and to contynue the charge thereof for the supporting of bothe yo^r allowaunces because [wee] weewould be loth yo^u shuld seeke further of, for yo^r necessary and convenient supplies then the places of yo^r residences or neare thervnto. And wee doubt not but the said consulage and Lone together wth suche forestere consulage as shall occurre will liberally wth an ouerplus support [the needfull] yo^r nedefull and convenient expense. w^{ch} said allowaunce of 3000 c^{rs} p^r ann^y yf it please yo^r to accepte shalbe from tyme to tyme answered yo^r by the Consull of Aleppo or soe much thereof as shall make vp the consulage and Lone money collected at Constantynople to ryse to the said [some] some of 3000 c^{rs}.

Another motive that hath drawn vs in to y^e taking of this course of a sett and standyng charge is some trowbles that hath happened vs of late by reason of a demaunde made by M^r John Bate to her ma^{ies} privy Counsell for the paym^t of v^{cl}i by a bill of exchange sent by M^r Barton vppon the late L Ther^r for soe much pretended by [him] the said Bate to be taken [vp vppon m^r Bates fact^r] *at Constantynople [vppon his] from his factor violently by cold of her ma^{ies} comission [to serve his turne to] to serve the ambassadors turne to goe wth the graund signio^r in to the Hungaria warres, [w^{ch} demaunde] vppon w^{ch} wee were convented before ther hono^r divers tymes and required to take some course to see him contented because as they affirmed m^r Barton was placed ambassador by o^r mediation. [and of w^{ch}] and for the protection of o^r trade of whose service ther honours alledged her ma^{ies} had no vse, but wee [examyning the the wee] lookinge into the manner of the growyng of the debt founde that the greatest part of the said v^{cl}i grewe vppon an accoumpte betwene the said m^r Barton and m^r Bate and that only 400 Cheskeens was taken vp by cōmaudem^t [whereof] wherein [three] divers others besides M^r Bate were interestted [but] [yet] in conclusion* wee [have absolutely] absolutelie denied to pay anie part of the said v^{ch} because the Bill came not vpon the companie, and also because ther are other billes of like kinde w^{ch} the said m^r Barton gave to other p^ticler men for divers great somes of money that would be required to be p^d by vs yf we shuld pay m^r Bates. [But of this matter] Of w^{ch} proceeding before the Counsell wee doe the rather geave you a tast, because vpon o^r deniall [m^r Bate] to geave satisfac^ōn. [he seemeth] Mr Bate seemeth to [have a] depend vpon some course or meane to recover his debt in Turkey ether vpon Peter Gallaunt or John Saunderson who deliuered the money or els by some other [meanes] extra-ordinarie course w^{ch} is doubted by some may concerne the companie or [preiudice] touche her ma^{ie} in hono^r whereof we pray yo^r L. have a care and to observe that ther be noe indirecte dealinge geaven way vnto no^r [wee] her ma^{ie} or the companie touched ether in damage or reputation by [defaulte] anie default or neglecte of the cause.

Wee do verie well allowe of yo^r L. course taken fo^r the satisfaction of the dragoman, and do thanke yo^r for yo^r care in the prevention of his coming hether and for all other yo^r carefull and painefull offices done for the good of the Companie w^{ch} wee pray yo^r Lo. contynue.

[For anie other speciall Other] For anie other speciall or p^ticler matter we have not at this tyme further to enlarge vnto yo^r L. other then [th] onlie this main and principall point w^{ch} wee of purpose reserve for a conclusion [conclude w^{ch} is for the better y^r L. better remembring thereof] which is this, that it hath bene moved both by yo^r frendes and others that wee shuld geave y^r L. this frendlie note (w^{ch} to yo^r modest disposition and tractable nature is thought to be sufficient) to have a care that the hono^r of y^r place doe not carry you into the error of y^r predecess^r. to deale in thinges imptinent to y^r employ^{mt} [place] nor that yo^r [or move yo^r to carrie soe highe a course to] beare yo^r selfe aloft in so highe a course as that o^r people seeme to be despised by yo^r L. [and] Nether that the authorytie of yo^r commission be extended or stretched to the cōmaunding of any mans goodes further then for yo^r necesarie supplie

according to our actes and ordenaunces [and contracts] and according to y^e meanes w^{ch} shalbe apointed by vs for the aunswering of y^e allowaunce agreable wth [the] o^r contracte made to her ma^{ty} or byagreem^t made betwene yo^r and us [too farre too farre into excessive expence for that the charge therof is to be borne by vs that are m^{ch}chaunt^e who have bene reproved and for p^mitting some of o^r Ambassad^{rs} to ruine into suche insolent co^sses of [ryott] excesse and ryot as they have done and have not in tyme acquainted suche of her ma^{ty}s counsell as might have repressed the extremyty thereof and for y^e wee have not taken good security for ther better carriage and behavio^r of ther place.]

The exceding of w^{ch} Limites by m^r Barton was imputed vnto vs by the L^d. of the Counsell as o^r fault for that wee [for that wee] had not taken good security for him for his conteyninge him self wth in some reasonable boundes [Limit^e] Thus not doubting of y^e L^d care both of yo^r owne hono^r and of that dewe regarde w^{ch} is to be had of vs who are willing to beare all reasonable charge that may conveniently be required to support the same wee comitt yo^r [and] Lordship and the direction of yo^r affaires to God. These being kepte vntill the of marche. 99 we add for further advyse to y^e L. touching the obteyning of foresteers, that wee were [certefyed] required by m^r Secretary that excepte ther were the like course taken wth the frenche ambassad^r at Constantynople to restraine him from using of any meanes by procuring or inviting [forcyble vrging] the Dutche and other nations foresteers to come vnder his protection that yo^u shuld not neede to geave way [to yo^r pre] or forbear any [lawfull] reasonable [anie meanes] course to procure them to come vnder yo^r protection. and wee do not heare of any [course] order that hath bene taken to restraine the frenche ambassado^r yo^r competito^r therfore o^r advyse is that you geave him no advauntage but wee leaue yo^u to yo^r owne wysdome and discretion to proceede [prevaille] therin [as yo^u cañ best] by the best meanes yo^u can devyse to prevayle in yo^r purpose Wee send yo^u here [in] inclosed the copies of o^r

S^R o^r hartie cōmendacons premysed &c: yo^r last of the 29th of September wth [th] yo^r former therin recyted we have rec^d And wher yo^u seeme discouraged [by] to accepte of a certen allowaunce from the companie to bea^rg yo^r charge in Aleppo [of consulage] according to the offer made yo^u of the $\frac{1}{2}$ Consulage wth discouragem^t groweth as yo^r alledge by reason of the Dutches ther discoverie of the East Indies. Wee see not [cause] anie reason whie that shuld be any iust discouragem^t or cause to move yo^r to chaunge yo^r former opinion for that wee o^r selves whom the care of o^r trade concerneth more then this [pticler contracte] pticler contracte may concerne you are noe way doubtfull of anie preiudice that cañ [growe] spedelie growe vnto vs by ther discoverie for ther are manie impediment^e that may hinder [a trade of soe] ther voiages of soe longe [and great] courses and great adventures, and may move the dutche m^r chaunt^e rather to frequent a knowen and peaceable trade in Turkey then hassard the daunger of Seas and enemyes of soe longe a circuite and infestious clymates. [And besides] Nether it is o^r intention [is not] to tye yo^u to any inconvenience but for o^r better satisfaction in mainteyning^e a knowen charge. wee wishe yo^u to Wee rather incyte yo^a [heretofore] to this course for that wee doubt not but the Ambassado^r will accepte of a sett allowaunce for y^e defraying of his charges at Constantynople. to w^{ch} [ende] effecte wee have written him. And to thende that both a competent and convenient main-tenanc^e may be levied to defray both his and yo^r charges wee have ordered by acte of Courte that all shippes that comē for [y^e Aleppo] Allexandretta Constantynople or other the portes of Turkey besides ther consulage shall by ther goodes contynue the Lone of $\frac{1}{2}$ doller vppon a kersy and the like of every C of Tynn cony skines &c. returning for the somes lent [by] billes of exchaung at vs [iiij] vj^d the doller. wth consulage and Lones together wth the helpe of the consulage of foresteers, we doubt not but the same wyll defray [all] bothe yo^r severall charges wth an overplus. and wee have geaven order to y^e said ambassado^r to make over vnto yo^a his billes [of exchange] for 3000 c^{ns} yerelie. or for so much as together wth his receipts of consulage and Lone at Consta: shall make up 3000 ch^{ns} whereof we pray yo^a see him supplied. The vncertenty of his payments and acceptation of his billes at venice besides, the repaiment of those billes by exchaung here comē many tymes vnseasonably to y^e Company when wee [they] were vnprovidid hath moved vs to take order for the bearing of o^r charge w^hin the compas of the places of o^r trade or chiefest residence.

 tolleration of the dutche for ther peaceable traffique in Turkey wee concurre wth you and hold it fitt to enterteyne them

 consulage, but as yo^a have had some experience of the frenche Ambassado^r his opposition against ther cōminge vnder o^r Con-

Wee resolving vppon all good and ready meanes to supply his L. accordinge to agreem^t do finde none soe apte as the contynuaunce of the Lone of $\frac{1}{2}$ doller vppon everie kersye, every Cth of Tynn and Cth of Cony skins, that come into Turkey together wth the consulage of the same goodes. And therfore have ordered that the same Lone shalbe contynued and rep^d here againe by exchaunge at [iiij^s] v^r vj^d the doller. vntyll the companie shall vppon further consideration otherwyse advyse. and to that ende wee have written to his L. to make his billes [by exchaung] vppon the consull at Aleppo for the payment of so much as wth the receipts at Consta: shall make up 3000 c^m p anfi as his occasions shall [move him] nedefully import him not doubting^e but the same together wth the graund signio^r his allowaunce (the contynuaunce whereof we nothing doubt) will very lyberally defray his expences. to y^e contynuaunce of w^{ch} course of chardging o^r goodes wee were the rather induced to avoyde[th] bothe yo^r and the ambassado^r trowble in seeking credite to supplie his occasions.

As touchinge the disposing of the Galata house wherin yo^a depende vppon o^r order wee [are of] wee thinke it fytt to be sold and made away to the best comoditie and advauntage. And wee wishe the same to be done yf it might be wthout bestowing anie further chardge thervppon, but yf yo^a thinke the Ruynes thereof being not in some sorte repaired would hinder vs more in the sale theñ. [some small charge the forbearing of] a matter of some small charg thervppon bestowed would amount vnto wee referre vs to yo^r good consideration [therin and leave it who doe] to take suche course therein as yo^a shall thinke may best advaunce the [o^r] sale still holding it for o^r full resolution that the same [is] shalbe sold away.
